II Answer the following Short Answers:

Q1 What special qualities of the asiam Lion are described in the poem?

Ans The asiam Lion is described as a large, majestic beast with a brownish-yellow hue. The poet humorously warns that if one encounters this roaring creature in the jungle and feels a sudden loss of life, it's likely an Asiam Lion! This playful exaggeration highlights the lion's fearsome nature.

Q1 How can we distinguish between a hyena and a crocodile?

Ans The poet humorously describes the hyena as an animal that laughs while devouring its prey, whereas the crocodile is known for shedding tears while consuming its victims. This playful contrast highlights their distinct behaviors - one appearing joyful, the other seemingly sorrowful - though both are fearsome predators.

Q3 How can chameleon be identified?

Ans The chameleon is described as a small, lizard-like creature that lacks ears and wings. The poet humorously suggests that if you nothing on a tree, it might be a chameleon blending into its surroundings. This highlights its remarkable ability to camouflage and remain unnoticed.

IV Answer the following Long Answers:

Q1 What humorous description do you find in the poem?

Ans Carolyn Wells uses humor to describe various wild creatures in exaggerated ways. The poems suggests that encountering an Asian Lion might be your last moment, as it roars fiercely. The Bengal Tiger is humorously identified by its strips - right before it eats you! The Leopard, with its spotted hide, leaps on its prey repeatedly, and the poet jokingly warns that crying out won't stop it. The Bear is said to give tight hugs, which could be dangerous. The Hyena is described as always smiling, while the Crocodile sheds fake tears. Finally, the chameleon is so well camouflaged that it seems invisible. The poem's playful tone makes learning about these animals entertaining!
